

Problem

Our property and casualty insurance client was going through a restructuring and needed an Interim IT Leader until a permanent hire for a Chief Information Officer (CIO) could be made. The initial and primary focus of this role was to oversee the IT department and maintain day-to-day productivity and service levels during the reorganization.

Response

Leveraging our vast insurance network, Jacobson was able to identify a proven IT executive, who could quickly step into the interim CIO role and begin identifying and addressing the client's technology needs. In addition to overseeing day-to-day IT functions, this consultant was able to provide strategic leadership over their ongoing IT projects, including those pertaining to the technical interfaces and interconnections between various company assets.

Solution

Jacobson's consultant was an indispensable asset during the client's reorganization. Our client was so pleased with the value our IT expert brought to their company and ongoing IT projects that they extended the initial six-month assignment to more than one year.
